The Town Hall, situated in Martiri della Libertà Square was built in the thirties and follows a rationalist style. It was designed by the architect Piero Borradori to give a prestigious building to the new institution, born from the union of Villa San Fiorano and La Santa, suburb of Monza, by royal decree in 1929. Here you can see also a memorial to the fallen soldiers in both world wars; in particular there is a statue representing a mother's farewell to her son going to war. It was designed by Eugenio Baroni and unveiled in 1922 in another place, moved in the Town Hall Square in 1958 and positioned there again in 2010 on the occasion of the square's restoration. Walking to west along Garibaldi Road, immediately on the left, you can see two significant maps representing the town in 1721 and in 1855, in addition to a huge reproduction of a cartography of Lambro River, originally sketched by engineer Barca in 1615. Following this way, you will reach Camperio Square; there you will find a peculiar Fountain whose drainages are named after four ditches, which once flowed in Villasanta from Lambro River and Molgorana creek. Nearby, in Don Gervasoni Square, you can see a statue made in bronze created by Maurizio Dusio and dedicated to the laundresses of Villasanta; behind it, in Ada Negri Street, a copper bas-relief made by Federico Severino can also be seen. It represents the craftsmanship which once was typically local. Following Confalonieri Road you will meet Villa Camperio, built in the XVII century, which nowadays is property of the municipality. Here stands the "Aldo Moro" Public Library where the Camperio Archive Group is preserved too: it consists in a series of historical photos, books and documents. From here, you can get to the Sant'Anastasia Church situated beside a Museum of Sacred Art (MUAS), which can be visited; of great importance the little chest with valuables and ornaments used during liturgical functions. Before entering the cycling lane which leads to the Monza Park Entrance you will walk across Oggioni Square, where the panel named "Com'era Com'è", reports the history of the square, showing it in a postcard dated back to the 40s.
